International Society of Criminology

The International Society for Criminology (ISC) was founded in Rome, Italy in 1937. Its objective is to support activities and research designed to produce a better understanding of the crime phenomenon on an international scale. The Society promotes the prevention of crime as well along with improving the procedures used by the various criminal justice systems. Its activities, therefore, focus both on scientific and practical issues.

The Society enjoys advisory status at the United Nations and the Council of Europe, and participates in UNESCO’s work. As a non-governmental organisation, the International Society for Criminology is one of the most active and influential scholarly associations at the forefront in addressing the challenges and problems posed by crime and deviance and in finding solutions that also fully respect human rights and democratic values.

World Congress of Criminology 2016

Since 1938, the World Congresses of Criminology, held under the auspices of ISC, aims to serve as the melting pot for academicians, researchers, professionals and policy makers from all over the world to meet and discuss upon the current issues of crime and deviance prevalent in current society, in order to formulate the best policies and solutions for effective prevention and intervention. The 18th World Congress of Criminology to be held at O. P. Jindal University Campus in New Delhi, India from the 15th to 19th December, 2016.

As a platform for healthy learning and discussion, we welcome all professionals and scholars, especially the youth, to join us in conversation and debate as we share new ideas, insights, data and energies to make this Congress successful as an effective campaign to create and sustain a safe and secure world. We hope the Congress will provide you with an opportunity to increase your knowledge, improve your future work and build your friendships in the society.

We are committed to enhancing educational opportunities and community engagement and seek to establish a world class Institute in Asia which conducts and applies best behavioural and social science practices in innovative education, research, scholarship and clinical care.
Greetings from India and the O.P. Jindal Global University! Jindal Institute of Behavioural Sciences (JIBS) of O.P. Jindal Global University is excited to collaborate with the International Society of Criminology (ISC) to host this conference in India. Even as individual states forge policies and measures to prevent and control crime within their borders, growing globalization has underlined the need for a broader and international collaboration in criminological research. In order to improve our response to the current challenges in crime and to ensure the protection of the states and individuals, we need to encourage investments and research in modern forms of crime prevention and control. The opportunities and challenges faced by developing and developed countries in urbanization, globalization, development and crime control will be a theme that will run through the thematic sessions of the conference. So, please come and join us in an active and enthusiastic series of discussion, conversation and debate on the current issues of crime plaguing our society and help ideate and formulate policies for effective intervention and prevention.

This year, we are proud to present a platform for experts in all fields of criminology, both young and old, to come together to explore and brainstorm on the universal challenges faced in development and crime prevention by societies worldwide in the 21st century. In the three days of the congress, we look forward to visiting and enriching ourselves different perspectives on causes of crime and their consequences on the society and the politics of crime. It is our firm belief and intention to facilitate such scholarly sharing of knowledge that will hopefully lead to solution-oriented debates and policy reforms that can be further carried forward by the governments, community and non-governmental organizations. At this juncture of the century, we are well placed to initiate new research, encourage intellectual insights and enhance community understanding of streetwise reality that will provide appropriate solutions to current crisis and can change the quality of lives and economies of various countries in the coming years. We invite and welcome everyone to participate and support the Congress to create viable solutions to eradicate such problems for the welfare of the society.
MESSAGES from ISC

Prof. (Dr.) Emilio C. Viano
President
International Society of Criminology

Prof. (Dr.) Jianhong Liu
President, Scientific Commission
International Society of Criminology

Greetings and welcome to the XVIII World Congress of Criminology. The theme of the XVIII Congress addresses some of the most serious and cogent problems facing our societies now. In many parts of the world, rapid urbanization, industrialization and migration to the cities are major factors at times associated with higher crime rates in urban centers. Insecurity is a foremost concern for millions of citizens in several countries. We welcome all international and local communities, non-governmental organizations and especially young people to be present and active at the Congress. It is our firm intention that the Congress be a point of departure for the beginning of a major effort and a sustained campaign to make our world more just, safe and secure for all. Your participation in this dynamic event will join together intellectual insight, rigorous research findings, and streetwise understanding into an unbreakable commitment and a powerful movement to address crime and deviance in a sustained, resolute and effective way worldwide.

On behalf of International Society of Criminology, jointly with its President Emilio C. Viano, I would like to warmly invite and welcome you to the XVIII World Congress of Criminology. Over the past few decades, leading criminologists have recognised the increasing importance of Asia in understanding the sources of crime, and also the global impact of crime from Asia. The leaders of the International Society of Criminology appreciate the importance of Asia and the contributions of Asian Criminologists and their perspectives for understanding global crime and its remedies. For this reasons, India was selected as the site of the XVIII Congress of the International Society of Criminology and O.P. Jindal Global University as the venue for this important event. We expect this Congress to be another great one as our previous congresses have been in many countries of the world, bringing together a large group of scholars, policy makers, professionals from all over the world to exchange ideas and new knowledge about crime and its control in a globalized world. We hope you enjoy this exciting event!
